Introduction :

Since the early eighties a number of developing countries have adopted economic and political reforms. The aim of such reforms is to foster growth and development in these countries. An important strand of the economic research is now focussing on various aspects of policy reforms: desirability, impact, implementation and so forth. The Congress targets this research. Its objective is to shed light on the impact in terms of growth, development and the welfare of the population as well as to draw valuable lessons from previous experiences of policy reforms. The Congress will bring together researchers from various fields (economics, politics, history..) in order to confront their experiences and opinions on policy reforms in developing countries.

Topics :

- Implementation, sequencing and speed of reforms..
- Structural and macroeconomic policies: design, complementarity…
- Political economy of policy reforms
- Privatization, regulation, competition and policy
- Institutions, governance and the role of the state
- Financial markets and growth
- Globalization, integration and cooperation.
- Reforms, growth and the environment.
- Winners, losers and redistribution policies.
